The Golden Rule: Scoring Big for Character

Under the leadership of head coach Henry Vales, The Golden Rule Foundation supports local character-education activities involving community service. Assistant coach Kimbrough Jennings says it’s the best way to tackle kids’ academic and social troubles.

Teachers on The Golden Rule team incorporate a community problem into their class curriculum and then help their students draft a game plan to resolve it. And when that play is executed, it’s a win-win for kids and their community.

Students grow academically and socially as they apply their lessons to real-life situations, explore positive character traits while working in teams and solving problems, and discover firsthand that they have the power to change the world.

The community benefits immediately from the kids’ hard work, but also reaps long-term rewards as children grow into intelligent, well-rounded, civic-minded adults.

Get behind the “good-character team.” Show your giving spirit!
